SUPPLY CHAIN MANAGEMENT AT CAPE BRETON UNIVERSITY

Cape Breton University, located on Canada's east coast, launched a suite of courses focused on one of the fastest growing sectors in the country – Supply Chain Management. The 4-year Bachelor of Business Administration program now offers students the opportunity to focus on SCM theory and practice, providing them with the foundations to understanding today's global economy. With professors conducting leading-edge research, small class sizes and an energetic campus life, CBU will quickly become more than your university – it will become your home away from home!

WHY STUDY SUPPLY CHAIN MANAGEMENT?

Supply Chain Management involves the management of materials, finances and information as they move from manufacturer, through the supplier and retailer, and ultimately to the end user. Organizations are increasingly placing emphasis on improving their operations and supply chain performance as efficient management of transportation and logistics is vital to economic growth.

In Canada, the supply chain is one of the most essential sectors of the economy involving more than 820,000 workers from a range of occupations and industries. CBU's newly-designed courses introduce all facets of supply chain management from a theoretical and practical perspective.
